We build our Vodkas and gins from the ground up in Maine because we understand you can’t fake genuine quality. It takes better ingredients and smaller batches. It requires a commitment to doing things the right way rather than the popular way. It means having the passion and patience to personally own every single step of the spirit-making process.

And it isn’t easy.

We use whole-potatoes grown on our own family farm. We triple-distill our spirits in a copper pot still because it delivers the perfect level of refinement. We bottle and number each batch by hand to ensure its authenticity. The end result is quality handcrafted Gins and Vodkas that promise a true American spirit and truly good taste.
