

The original Timorous Beastie, immortalized in Robert Burns' famous Scots poem "To a Mouse" was a timid, little field mouse. Echoing our national bard's wit, ours is most certainly not for the fainthearted! Timorous Beastie captures the essence of The Highlands as a marriage of the region's finest malts. It is, of course, proudly without coloring or chill-filtration and bottled at 46.8% alcohol, resulting in an oily, chewy spirit that brings an incredible mouth-feel.

On the nose, it is initially stately and sweet, then warming to zest and floral, with light barley and spicy honeyed tones. It opens up in a spicy style with fructiferous notes of raisin and a sugary, fudgey character. Entering on the palate are orange marmalade, warmed treacle, toasted grain, buttered brioche, and honeyed chamomile. The finish is subtle yet sweet, with vanilla and oak elements combining with hints of milky cereals and a late flash of meringue.

Matured in ex-bourbon casks, this composed and harmonic Highlander showcases malts from such distilleries as Blair Athol, Dalmore, Glen Garioch, and Glengoyne. Timorous Beastie is a grain-driven testament to the affable style of the Scottish Highlands. A blended malt for those seeking something classy, well-integrated, rich and luxurious.
